

Reconceptualization of the African Diaspora

By Erica Ball, Melina Pappademos, Michelle Ann Stephens

Duke University Press. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Reconceptualization of the African Diaspora, Erica Ball, Melina Pappademos, Michelle Ann Stephens, This special issue of "Radical History Review" aims to revitalize African diaspora studies by shifting current emphases within the field. The contributors rethink current understandings of African and diaspora as a dispersal of Africans from the African continent via the Atlantic slave trade and offer re-conceptualizations of dominant paradigms, such as home, origins, migrations, politics, blackness, African, Africa, African-descended, and Americanness. The contributors draw on perspectives from political science, history, cultural studies, art history, anthropology, feminist theory, sexuality and queer studies, and Caribbean and African American studies. The collection addresses transnational discourses of race, gender, and sexuality in African diaspora politics, African diaspora experiences on the African continent, the politics of African-descended peoples in Europe, and creative uses of the discourses of memory and diaspora to support political organizing and local struggles. Essays on Venezuelans, Bolivians, and Mexicans address the status of race in the study of African-descended populations and cultures in Latin America. The issue also includes two essays that showcase African diasporic art and curatorial practices in the United States, the Caribbean, and the United Kingdom. The contributors include...

Reviews

It is a single of my personal favorite ebook. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. I am effortlessly getting a satisfaction of reading a published ebook.
