Excerpt: .it to its head we found the spring known as Agua Dulce, or sweet water. It is a pool twenty or thirty feet in diameter, several feet deep, and beautifully clear. Our thirsty mules drank with avidity, and after procuring a supply for camp, we continued our journey to the plains of Buenos Ayres. After riding a couple of leagues over volcanic fragments, thickly strewn over the ground, we entered a broad plain, extending to the north and northeast as far as the eye could reach, covered with clumps of mesquit-trees, bushes, and tree yucca, while the soil, rich and fertile and without stones, was clothed with a profusion of grass. I find a memorandum on the margin of my note-book at this point, Not a cactus in sight, followed by a large and emphatic-looking exclamationmark. This was not strictly correct. After writing it,...
